This response to a COI query has been elaborated according to the EUAA COI Report Methodology and EUAA Writing and Referencing Guide.

Query responses are produced in response to COI information requests received from asylum authorities within EU+ countries or initiated by EUAA based on COI information needs. Query responses are produced within a limited time period, typically within 5 to 10 days. Within these time constraints, the information provided in this response has been researched, evaluated and processed with utmost care.

All sources used are referenced and cited in the bibliography section. A quality review has been performed in line with the above mentioned COI methodology. This document does not claim to be exhaustive or conclusive as to the merit of any particular claim to international protection. If a certain event, person or organisation is not mentioned in the report, this does not mean that the event has not taken place or that the person or organisation does not exist. Terminology used should not be regarded as indicative of a particular legal position.

The information in the response does not necessarily reflect the opinion of EUAA and makes no political statement whatsoever. The target audience is caseworkers, COI researchers, policy makers, and decision-making authorities. Any event taking place after the reference period is not included in this query response.

COI QUERY RESPONSE – Guinea

Situation of single women without a support network, including with children out of wedlock; legal framework; treatment by society; access to support services

Situation of single women without a support network, including with children out of wedlock

A study on gender equality in Guinea, published in 2022 by Gaïa Développement¹ indicated that over 77 % of divorcees and 94 % of widowed individuals were female.² The same source explained that divorced or widowed women often faced challenges in remarrying due to limited suitors, especially if they lacked financial stability, were older, or had children to support.³ In certain cultures, widows may be remarried to a brother or close relative of their deceased husband based on decisions made by family councils.⁴

According to the local news source Guineematin.com, in 2023, numerous divorced, widowed, or single women living with children in Guinea face significant challenges, including the need for food, clothing, training, and peaceful coexistence within their communities.⁵

Further information on the situation of single women without a support network including with children out of wedlock could not be found among the sources consulted by the EUAA within the time constraints of this query.

In a report covering 2023, Freedom House noted that ‘women face pervasive societal discrimination and disadvantages in both the formal and traditional justice systems’.⁶ Further, sources described that women faced gender-based disadvantages in law and did not have the same legal status as men in inheritance and property.⁷ In addition, the United States Department of State (USDOS) added that discrimination was also present in employment, credit, and divorce.⁸ The same source added that ‘traditional practices historically discriminated against women and sometimes took precedence over the law, particularly in rural areas’.⁹ The source highlighted that ‘divorce laws generally favored men in awarding custody and dividing communal assets’, as well ‘legal testimony given by women commonly carried less weight than testimony by men’.¹⁰

On divorce, the Civil Code of Guinea (2019)¹¹, Article 304 states [informal translation]:

‘Divorce can be pronounced either:
- by mutual consent;
- in the event of a breakdown in the common life;
- for fault.’¹²

Further, Article 336 states [informal translation]:

‘to contract a new marriage, the woman must observe a waiting period of 130 days.’¹³

Moreover, according to a research paper by the World Bank from May 2023, ‘discrimination between men and women was still present in Guinean statutory law’, despite reforms in the Civil Code of 2019¹⁴, which ‘eliminated’ restrictions on women’s capacity ‘to be head of household’ or to get a divorce in ‘the same way as men’.¹⁵

Guineematin.com indicated that single mothers were sometimes stigmatized and exposed to certain social difficulties.¹⁶ Corroborating information could not be found among the sources consulted by EUAA within the time constraints of this query. Concerning women with children born out of wedlock, the same news source described that they are required to repent before men should consider marrying them, according to an interview with a local imam.¹⁷

The World Bank further illustrated that religious beliefs and traditional norms ‘prohibited sexual intercourse out of wedlock, deterring young women from seeking family planning and sexual health orientation’.¹⁸ Moreover, statistics illustrated by the World Bank, described that ‘single women’ were one of the ‘most vulnerable’ to physical intimate-partner violence and women aged 15–24 and women aged 25–34 faced the highest risk of experiencing physical gender-based violence.¹⁹ Corroborating information could not be found among the sources consulted by EUAA within the time constraints of this query.

According to the World Bank, women and girls have a ‘very poor status’ in Guinean society, and according to the United Nations Development Program Gender Inequality Index for 2021, Guinea ranked 182 out of 191, as one of the countries in the world with rampant gender inequality.²⁰ The 2023 country report by USDOS noted that ‘although the government did not ban girls from staying in school during pregnancy and motherhood, religious, cultural, and societal stigma or pressures often led the families of pregnant girls or adolescent mothers to deprioritize their education’.²¹
