COI QUERY RESPONSE - Iraq

Treatment of Yazidis by the state and by society in Iraq, in particular in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq (KRI); information on recruitment of Yazidi children by armed groups, including the PKK

1. Background information

1.1. General background information

Yazidis¹ are an ancient ethno-religious group residing in northern Iraq,² as well as in parts of Syria, Türkiye, Armenia and Georgia.³ Other sources indicate that Yazidis are a distinct religious group within the Kurdish ethnic group.⁴ The religious beliefs and practices of the Yazidis have been ‘misunderstood’ and they have been called ‘devil worshippers and polytheists’ by religious extremists such as the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL)⁵ group.⁶ In August 2014, ISIL started its ‘genocide campaign’ against Yazidis in Sinjar. Up to 450 000 people were displaced,⁷ 5 000 killed,⁸ and over 6 400 abducted.⁹

Estimates of Yazidis living in Iraq range from some 550 000 - 600 000¹⁰ to up to 800 000 people.¹¹ According to Yazidi leaders, most of the Yazidis in Iraq live in the Ninewa governorate and in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq (KRI)^{12,13} The January 2022 Iraq COI report by EUAA reported on a presence of Yazidis living as small minorities in the governorates of

Diyala, Dohuk, Erbil, as well as in the Baghdad City.¹⁴ Located in the Ninewa governorate,¹⁵ 120 km west from the regional capital Mosul,¹⁶ the city of Sinjar (called in Kurdish Shingal)¹⁷ is considered the Yazidi historic homeland.¹⁸ The city has a diverse population consisting of the Yazidi majority and the minorities including Sunni and Shia Arabs, Sunni Kurds, and Assyrian Christians.¹⁹ Sinjar is one of the disputed areas between federal Iraq and Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG)²⁰ and it is under a dual administration of the both authorities.²¹

According to a Yazidi leader, almost 300 000 Yazidis resided in internally displaced persons (IDP) camps in Kurdistan, mostly in Dohuk and to a smaller extent in Sinjar, as of August 2024,²² while another source puts the number at 200 000 IDPs.²³ According to Yazidi representatives, out of 6 417 Yazidis abducted by ISIL, 2 847 remained missing as of April 2024.²⁴ Additional hundreds of Yazidis remained detained in Syria, in particular in the Al-Hol camp in north-east Syria.²⁵ Yazidi activists organized in non-governmental organizations continued working towards finding missing persons.²⁶ Yazidi women continued to be rescued from ISIL captivity²⁷ and Yazidi mass graves continued to be discovered in the reference period.²⁸ As of August 2024, '61 of the 94 known mass graves in Sinjar have been exhumed'.²⁹

At the United Nations level, the Investigative Team to Promote Accountability for Crimes Committed by Da'esh/ISIL (UNITAD), was mandated 'to support domestic efforts to hold ISIL (Da'esh) accountable by collecting, preserving and storing evidence of its crimes in Iraq that may amount to war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide', including against Yazidis. On 11 September 2024, UNITAD published a report on its findings regarding Yazidis that concluded that 'UNITAD has reasonable grounds to believe that war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide were committed.'³⁰ UNITAD's mandate concluded on 17 September 2024.³¹

1.2. Closure of IDP camps and returns to Sinjar

In 2022, United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA) described the level of needs of IDPs in some of the camps, including in the KRI, as 'extreme or catastrophic'.³²

In August 2023, the last IDP camp in federal Iraq was closed.³³ In January 2024, the Iraqi federal government announced the plan to close the remaining IDP camps in the KRI³⁴ to encourage people to return back to Sinjar.³⁵ The 23 camps for IDPs in the KRI, hosting mostly Yazidis, were meant to close by 30 July 2024.³⁶ In practice, this would mean the IDP camps in Dohuk, where all Yazidi camps were located, according to a January 2024 United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) report.³⁷ The Iraqi government offered a one-time payment of 4 million dinars [about 2 823 EUR]³⁸ to those who leave.³⁹ Human Rights Watch (HRW) reported that other incentives for the returnees included 'some government jobs, social security benefits, and interest-free small business loans',⁴⁰ as well as 'a fridge, a stove, and a television', as reported by Rudaw.⁴¹

However, local KRG authorities refused to implement the order, arguing that Sinjar was not ready for the returns, and they negotiated the delay of the closure until the end of 2024.⁴² As of April 2023, 43 % of over 300 000 displaced people returned to Sinjar.⁴³ In 2023, some 5

000 Yazidis returned to Sinjar.⁴⁴ Even though the closure of the camps has been postponed, some IDPs have started moving to Sinjar, according to an August 2024 report.⁴⁵ In the period of 1 April – 15 August 2024, the International Organization for Migration (IOM) recorded the return of 1 952 families to Ninewa, out of which 955 families returned to Sinjar.⁴⁶ As of June 2024, most Yazidis from Sinjar were still living in IDP camps in KRI.⁴⁷ Concerning the returnees to Sinjar, a Chatham House report indicated that they ‘were either fighters or relatives of fighters associated with the PMF [Popular Mobilization Forces] and PKK [Kurdistan Workers’ Party].’⁴⁸

In August 2024, 10 years since ISIL started its campaign against the Yazidis, Sinjar has not been rebuilt.⁴⁹ According to a June 2024 report, ‘most Yezidi areas in Sinjar remain uninhabited, destroyed, and abandoned.’⁵⁰ The return of people to Sinjar has been delayed because of poor infrastructure⁵¹ and services,⁵² safety and security concerns⁵³ and presence of armed groups.⁵⁴ Other obstacles were failures of the government to provide compensation for lost properties and to reconstruct damaged and destroyed homes and infrastructure,⁵⁵ as well as lack of justice and accountability for perpetrators of crimes against Yazidis⁵⁶ and political disagreements over the region’s administration between the central and KRI governments.⁵⁷ Sources also reported on difficulties when accessing healthcare,⁵⁸

2. Treatment by the state

The 2005 Constitution of the Republic of Iraq states:

'This Constitution guarantees the Islamic identity of the majority of the Iraqi people and guarantees the full religious rights to freedom of religious belief and practice of all individuals such as Christians, Yazidis, and Mandaean Sabeans.'⁶⁵

In 2015, Iraq's Council of Ministers issued a decree stating that the crimes committed by Da'esh [Arabic for ISIL], including against Yazidis, amounted to the crime of genocide.⁶⁶

Additionally, Iraq's Council of Representatives has issued a decree with provisions for:

- '(a) Measures by the Government to free abducted Yazidi women and to undertake reconstruction work in the district of Sinjar
- (b) The designation of victims of the acts committed by Da'esh terrorist gangs against the people of Sinjar as martyrs, thus making them eligible for all the concomitant rights and privileges
- (c) The formation of a committee to examine the genocide of Yazidis by Da'esh terrorist gangs.'⁶⁷

In Mosul, federal Iraq's authorities established a body to investigate abuses committed by ISIL against women from minority groups, and in Ninewa, a special court to investigate ISIL's crimes has been set up.⁶⁸

Regarding the KRI, local authorities created special committees including one concerning abducted persons and another to investigate crimes by ISIL against Yazidis. In Dohuk, a ‘genocide centre’ was opened, a ‘rehabilitation centre’ was opened in Erbil, and another 50 ‘awareness-raising centres’ were opened elsewhere in the country.⁶⁹ People rescued from captivity, including almost 2 000 children, were provided with the required health services.⁷⁰

According to a 2009 federal law concerning compensation of victims of war,⁷¹ people from Sinjar are entitled to financial compensation for loss of property, however, as of February 2024, no compensation was given even though over 8 000 claims have been registered, according to HRW.⁷² In December 2022, Iraqi federal government issued a decree giving Yazidis ownership of their land and houses in Sinjar.⁷³ Further information on the implementation of the decree could not be found within time constraints.

In October 2020, the federal Iraqi government and the KRG signed an agreement that was meant to increase the stability and boost the reconstruction in Sinjar and enable the return of people to the area.⁷⁴ The agreement was also supposed to address the issue of armed groups and militias and specifically demanded the departure of the PKK.⁷⁵ Instead, a local security force consisting of Yazidis was to be created.⁷⁶ Of proposed 2 500 members of this force, 1 500 places were reserved for the returning Yazidis, while 1 000 place were to be divided between the residents, including Yazidis, Sunni Arabs, and Kurds.⁷⁷ The implementation of the October 2020 agreement has been slow⁷⁸ and as of August 2024, it has not been fully implemented.⁷⁹ According to a report, co-authored by Yazda, Wilson Center, and Zovighian Public Office, ‘the lack of political will to enable an equitable and safer future for Yazidis is clearly systemic'.⁸⁰ In 2023, the federal government ordered the reconstruction of the Koho village in Sinjar.⁸¹

In March 2021, federal Iraqi parliament adopted the Law on Yazidi female survivors (Act no. 8 of 2021), aimed at providing 'reparation for women belonging to ethnic and ethno-religious groups in light of the crimes against humanity and war crimes committed by Da'esh'.⁸² In June 2021, the government allocated 25 billion dinars [about 17 645 833 EUR]⁸³ to implement the law.⁸⁴ As of September 2022, 600 beneficiaries were receiving the monthly payments,⁸⁵ and as of December 2023, some 1 400 survivors were receiving the monthly payments from the government.⁸⁶ The United Nations Security Council (UNSC) reported that 1 600 applications have been approved.⁸⁷ According to an Al Jazeera report from 2022, the federal government lacked a will to fully implement the law,⁸⁸ and Amnesty International (AI) stated that the requirement by the survivors to file a criminal complaint to access the assistance, announced by the authorities in April 2023, 'seriously undermines survivors' best interests and hinders adequate, prompt and effective reparation'.⁸⁹ The law did not include provisions on a situation of children born to fathers linked to ISIL and Yazidi mothers.⁹⁰

According to the USDOS, in 2023, 'the [federal] government reported minimal progress in locating or rescuing missing Yazidis'.⁹¹ The same source noted that KRI authorities continued to work to release Yazidis abducted by ISIL in 2023.⁹² The office of the KRI presidency has established a dedicated Yazidi rescue office.⁹³ Sources indicated that the office continued to conduct operations to free Yazidi women from ISIL captivity, with reported cases in 2023⁹⁴ and 2024,⁹⁵ and it did so in cooperation with the Iraqi armed forces.⁹⁶ In March 2024, a Yazidi woman was rescued from the al-Hol camp in Syria by the Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) and repatriated to Iraq by the federal Iraq's national intelligence service.⁹⁷

Concerning the ability of Yazidis to relocate within the KRI, and if they originate from outside the KRI, a 2022 report by the UNCHR stated that in the case of Erbil and Sulaymaniyah, Yazidis were able to enter the governorates without restrictions upon presenting valid personal documentation. In the case of Dohuk, just like all other ethnic and religious groups, they would be subjected to a security screening and issued a temporary residency for 30 days that could be extended. Yazidis originating from KRI could relocate between the governorates ‘generally’ without restrictions.⁹⁸ According to a January 2024 UNHCR report, the KRG authorities stated that the IDPs must remain in the camps in Dohuk even though some were living in informal settlements outside of the camps in the same governorate.⁹⁹

Covering 2023, the United States Department of State (USDOS) reported that ‘local authorities in some provinces continued to impose restrictions’ on Yazidis, without providing more information on the nature of the restrictions and in what governorates they occurred.¹⁰⁰ In August 2024, a Yazidi man in Sinjar was charged with blasphemy and arrested by a court in Ninewa.¹⁰¹ In the KRI, Yazidis were allowed by local authorities to practice their religion ‘without interference or intimidation’ and some of their religious holidays were recognized as local holidays.¹⁰²

Regarding the prosecution of persons responsible for crimes against Yazidis, the jurisdiction lies with the Iraqi judiciary and the office of the public prosecution.¹⁰³ According to a UN report, ‘no report needs to be made or complaint filed for such offences to be investigated and their perpetrators prosecuted, because they constitute crimes against the public weal which are prosecuted as a matter of course.’¹⁰⁴ BBC News reported that ‘Iraqi courts have handed down hundreds of death sentences and life prison terms to men and women convicted of “membership of a terrorist organisation”’.¹⁰⁵ According to a September 2024 analysis, published by the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, while the Iraqi authorities have made attempts to prosecute those responsible for international crimes in Sinjar, they failed to effectively prosecute those responsible.¹⁰⁶ In June 2024, a court in Baghdad court issued a death sentence to a suspected ISIL member for ‘committing genocide’ against the Yazidis.¹⁰⁷ In July 2024, a wife of al-Baghdadi, a deceased former leader of the ISIL, was sentenced to death for detaining Yazidi women.¹⁰⁸

3. Treatment by society

Sources indicated that there is distrust between Yazidis and Sunni Arabs due to a perceived connection of Sunni Arabs to ISIL.¹⁰⁹ An older survey from 2018 found that some Yazidis believed that ‘90% of local Arabs to be ISIL members or supporters’.¹¹⁰ Similarly, a strong negative stereotype amongst non-Yazidi populations is that Yazidis worship the devil.¹¹¹ Inna Rudolf, a Senior Research Fellow at the International Centre for the Study of Radicalisation (ICSR) interviewed by Austrian Centre for Country of Origin and Asylum Research and Documentation (ACCORD), described that [informal translation] ‘it is important to recognize that deep-rooted and partly religiously motivated prejudices and hate speech against Yazidis still exist in the Kurdish region’.¹¹²

In August 2023, following the closure of the last IDP camp in federal Iraq, families with links to ISIL were sent back to Sinjar, which caused fear among Yazidis, according to the SEED Foundation, a local NGO supporting Yazidi survivors.¹¹³ At times, Yazidis have opposed return of displaced Sunni Arabs to Sinjar.¹¹⁴ In April 2023, Yazidis staged a protest in Sinjar after Sunni Arabs returned to the area.¹¹⁵

Following the protest, there were reports spreading on social media that Yazidis were throwing stones at mosques¹¹⁶ and that they burned a mosque.¹¹⁷ This was followed by violent hate posts online including death threats¹¹⁸, calling Yazidis infidels and devil worshippers¹¹⁹, including by local clerics.¹²⁰ According to sources, the accusations have been proven false.¹²¹

Yazidis in Iraq continued facing ‘significant challenges’.¹²² Yazidis faced discrimination, stigmatization¹²³ and there were cases of hate speech against them.¹²⁴ Yazidi students reported discrimination in education¹²⁵ and there was a lack of educational institutions in Sinjar.¹²⁶ Yazidis faced discrimination in accessing employment¹²⁷ including in the public sector in KRI and they also faced challenges in accessing permits to start private businesses.¹²⁸ Moreover, they reportedly could not work in the food industry or sell food items because of not adhering to Islamic rules and for their products not being halal.¹²⁹ Yazidi IDPs reported that some shop owners near the IDP camps refused to sell products to them.¹³⁰ According to a March 2023 article published by the Crown Center for Middle East Studies of the Brandeis University, ‘to gain access to the KRG’s patronage system, Yazidis must be members of one of the Kurdish political parties (the [Kurdistan Democratic Party] KDP or the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan [PUK]), which requires them to identify as ethnic Kurds and show support for the Kurdish cause.’¹³¹

Yazidi men faced insults for their appearance, namely for their mustaches, that are perceived as contravening Islamic law.¹³² USDOS reported that religious minorities, including Yazidis, were ‘verbally harassed and physically abused’ by the PMF.¹³³ In 2023, Yazidis operating stores selling alcohol reported that they faced blackmail and attacks by PMF militias.¹³⁴

In Yazidi culture, women are expected to behave ‘in a way that does not cast doubt on chastity or fidelity’ to protect the ‘honour of the family’.¹³⁵ Yazidi women who had children born from sexual violence faced exclusion from the community and some were forced to abandon their children.¹³⁶ Children born out of sexual violence were not recognized as Yazidis by some

Yazidi leaders.¹³⁷ These children were also at the risk of honour killings¹³⁸ and some Yazidi women preferred to stay in camps in Syria instead of leaving their children behind.¹³⁹ Women also faced a risk of honour killings.¹⁴⁰ Returnee women are vulnerable to re-trafficking.¹⁴¹ Female survivors of ISIL abuses suffered from mental health problems¹⁴² including suicidal behaviour.¹⁴³ Some Yazidi women were assisted and provided shelter by international NGOs.¹⁴⁴ Women in Sinjar faced difficulties when obtaining documentation.¹⁴⁵

Regarding the situation of children, there was a societal stigma attached to children born of Yazidi mothers and ISIL fathers.¹⁴⁶ Their exact number is not known but estimated in the hundreds.¹⁴⁷ According to Iraq's legislation, children inherit their fathers' religion and thus a child will be registered as Muslim even though the mother is Yazidi.¹⁴⁸ Returning women were reportedly more welcome than their children.¹⁴⁹ An October 2023 report by the Aid Gate Organization (AGO), an Iraqi NGO, providing support to the IDPs,¹⁵⁰ state that 'the Yazidi Supreme Spiritual Council stated in the third edict that children born of rape would not be welcomed back.'¹⁵¹ Abandoned children did not receive any documentation or nationality.¹⁵²

In 2022, it was reported that there were at least 11 armed actors active in Sinjar.¹⁵³ Some of the most prominent actors in Sinjar are the PKK and PMF (also known as PMU¹⁵⁴, an umbrella term for various armed groups, some with links to Iran¹⁵⁵).¹⁵⁶ The PKK rose to prominence because of their fight against ISIL.¹⁵⁷ Yazidi fighters have been affiliated with both Yazidi and Kurdish political parties, as well as, with the Shia PMF.¹⁵⁸ Yazidi armed groups include the Protection Forces of Ezidkhan and the Sinjar Resistance Units (YBS), both with alleged links to the PKK.¹⁵⁹ YBS has denied any affiliation with the PKK.¹⁶⁰ In May 2022, the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF) conducted an operation against the YBS-operated checkpoints in Sinjar and the clashes caused some 10 000 Yazidis to flee to the KRI. The displacement has been described as ‘their [Yazidis] ‘largest exodus’ since the 2014 genocide’.¹⁶¹

Other active forces in the region include units of the Iraqi army, the Kurdish Peshmerga forces,¹⁶² groups linked to PMF,¹⁶³ and federal and locals police forces.¹⁶⁴ Sources also indicated that the ISIL had a limited presence in the region.¹⁶⁵

In March 2024, PKK was banned from operating in Iraq by the federal government, stating that it represents a threat to Iraq and Türkiye.¹⁶⁶ Türkiye considers YBS and Ezidkhan Asayish to be part of the PKK and conducted numerous attacks against their members.¹⁶⁷

Sources reported that the areas inhabited by Yazidis faced attacks by Türkiye¹⁶⁸ that were allegedly targeting PKK members.¹⁶⁹ In practice, YBS have also been targeted.¹⁷⁰ In June 2022, a Turkish airstrike in Sinjar killed a Yazidi boy.¹⁷¹ In September 2023, a suspected Turkish drone attack targeting PKK hit a car with YBS members, killing three of them, according to the group.¹⁷² In July 2024, another suspected Turkish attack on a vehicle injured three journalists.¹⁷³

4.2. Recruitment

Covering 2023, USDOS reported that Yazidi militias ‘continued to draw some fighters’ from the local population, ‘but these groups remained subordinate to larger organizations controlled by Iran-aligned actors and militias’.¹⁷⁴ According to the same source, ‘Yezidi IDPs feel compelled to join one of the two armed factions to provide for their families.’¹⁷⁵ PMF factions recruited Yazidis who were ‘desperate for protection and any source of income’, including into the Kataib Imam Hussein (53rd PMF Brigade) and Yezidikan (80th PMF Brigade), as well as by Iran-backed, Ahrar Sinjar.¹⁷⁶

In April 2023, Kirkuk Now published an article about a recruitment process for a new brigade of PMF through a registration of volunteers.¹⁷⁷ Kurdistan24 reported that the recruits must have an Iraqi passport and that they will be deployed at the Iraq-Syria border in western Sinjar, and they will receive a monthly salary of 3000 $ [about 2774 EUR]^{178, 179} A Chatham House report published in May 2024 indicated that ‘many young Yezidis [...] have joined local PMF factions to access stable state salaries’.¹⁸⁰

Covering 2022, USDOS reported that ‘the PKK had kidnapped hundreds of Yezidi children to recruit and subject them to ideological “brainwashing” in the years since ISIL was defeated in Sinjar in 2015, although it was unclear how many of these kidnappings occurred during the year.’¹⁸¹ On 9 April 2022, a Yazidi boy returned to Sinjar after being kidnapped by PKK to become a fighter, after pressure by his family to release him.¹⁸² According to another report
